Dear Commissioner Kipper:

It is with great sadness that the D.C. Department of Insurance, Securities and Banking learned of Bill McCune's passing. Bill was the chief market conduct officer for the District of Columbia from September 2001 until December 2009. He was a hard-working, dedicated employee who worked far beyond the normal work week. He was always striving to learn, as evidenced by all the designations he earned – the letters after his name on his business card ran multiple lines.

Bill was always willing to assist others with his knowledge. Bill was a loyal and supportive manager of the market conduct examiners and did his best to help his staff excel in their jobs. Bill served as a volunteer management representative on the Department's Labor/Management Partnership Council that worked to create and maintain a good working environment for all staff. Bill was conscientious about his work. He was well-liked at our department and known for his unique sense of humor.

People in the department kept up with Bill after he left for Nevada, particularly those who regularly saw him at the National Association of Insurance Commissioners meetings and others who would still occasionally reach out to him for assistance. In fact, that is one of the most notable things about Bill in both his personal and professional life: He went out of his way to help others. He will be missed.

Sincerely,

William P. White
Commissioner
D.C. Department of Insurance, Securities and Banking
